

Copyright & Permissions

Last Updated: March 27, 2026

All content on this website, including text, articles, research materials, images, graphics, and design elements, is the property of the International Association of Sufism (“IAS”) unless otherwise indicated.

Content is protected by United States and international copyright laws.

Permitted Use

Visitors may:

- View and download materials for personal, educational, or non-commercial use
- Quote brief excerpts with proper attribution to IAS
- Link to content on this website

Prohibited Use

Without prior written permission, users may not:

- Reproduce or republish substantial portions of IAS content
- Use IAS materials for commercial purposes
- Modify or misrepresent IAS content or scholarship
- Mirror, scrape, or systematically copy website materials
- Use IAS content in a manner that implies endorsement by IAS

Requests for Permission

Requests to reproduce, republish, translate, or distribute IAS materials should be sent to:

Customer-Service@ias.org

Please include:

- the material you wish to use
- where it will appear
- whether the use is commercial or non-commercial

IAS reviews requests on a case-by-case basis.

Fair Use

Nothing in this policy is intended to restrict rights permitted under the fair use doctrine of U.S. copyright law.

Reporting Misuse

If you believe IAS content has been reproduced or used improperly, please contact:

Customer-Service@ias.org

IAS reserves the right to pursue appropriate legal remedies where necessary.
